

I strongly oppose that the FCC oppose the NAB's petition to prevent satellite radio from providing local traffic and weather information. Simply put, it's not within the NAB's rights to oppose this, as it's a First Amendment right for the satellite radio servicers to provide whatever content they desire. The NAB is simply afraid of the threat from satellite providers, because the NAB is all about restricting content and eliminating variety. Satellite programming is bucking this trend, and this is simply the NAB's way to help curb adoption of it. The FCC should not become involved in business strategies such as this, and should deny the petition immediately.
